

THE ATO IS A HOT TOPIC RIGHT NOW!

From the Fairfax and Four Corners joint investigation, to allegations that the whistle-blower that spoke to the joint investigation has been unfairly targeted by a Federal Police raid, politicians from across all parties are throwing their two cents worth in.

The spotlight is well and truly focused on the ATO and how the ATO enforces its extensive powers to collect outstanding debts.

Regardless of whether you think the ATO is too harsh or too soft in its debt collection approach, the fact remains that many small (and large) businesses fail to understand the ramifications of failing to pay tax or to lodge their activity statements on time. Further, many businesses do not realise that strategies implemented to reduce the amount of tax a company pays can result in personal liabilities for directors and/or shareholders.
